LOCATION

Lostwithiel is a small historic town in south-east Cornwall, beautifully set within the wooded valley of the River Fowey. Surrounded by rolling countryside and ancient woodland, the town is known for its peaceful atmosphere, medieval character, and strong sense of local heritage. Narrow streets lined with stone cottages, independent shops, cafés, and traditional pubs give Lostwithiel a warm and welcoming feel, while the river flowing through the town adds to its natural charm.

Once one of Cornwall's most important medieval centres, Lostwithiel still retains many historic features, including its old bridge and nearby Restormel Castle. Today, it is valued for its quiet pace of life, creative community, and attractive countryside setting, offering a more tranquil and authentic side of Cornwall away from the busy coastal resorts.
