Description

An exceptional and historically significant waterfront residence, Parkmead offers a rare opportunity to acquire a truly unique home set in one of Oulton Broad's most desirable positions.

Built in 1968 by the Truman family as part of their neighbouring boatyard at the Old Maltings (established 1832), the property is steeped in innovation and heritage. Commander Desmond Truman and his partner, Sir Christopher Cockerell, pioneers of the first hovercraft and co-founders of the British Hovercraft Company, designed and developed early prototypes here, which were first tested on Oulton Broad itself.

Designed by local architect Alan Paine, the home has been thoughtfully created to maximise natural light and take full advantage of its stunning waterside setting. The property has remained privately owned since construction and has never been offered on the open market.

Set within a generous plot extending approximately 300ft from the waterside to the front boundary, the grounds feature mature trees and established planting to both front and rear gardens, creating a private and tranquil environment. Ample parking is available, with garaging for two vehicles and additional space for up to four more on the tarmac driveway.

The waterfront is a standout feature, boasting a substantial steel-piled mooring dock measuring approximately 40ft deep by 30ft wide, with capacity for two large motorboats. The property also benefits from riparian rights extending approximately 50ft from the bank, as well as a slipway suitable for dinghies and paddleboards.

Internally, the property offers exciting scope for enhancement and expansion. Both sections of the undercroft present clear potential for conversion into additional living accommodation, while architectural plans have been prepared to extend the dining room roof area to create two further bedrooms and bathrooms (subject to full planning approval). The existing residence presents an impressive and beautifully appointed entrance hall, where striking, design led mid century modern windows flood the space with exceptional natural light. From here, doors lead gracefully to three well-proportioned bedrooms, a separate WC, and an elegant internal dining room distinguished by its exquisite cedar panelled ceiling, creating a warm and characterful setting for entertaining.

The principal living areas are arranged with a sense of openness and flow, offering generous open plan proportions ideally suited to contemporary living. At the heart of the home lies a bespoke, fully fitted kitchen, thoughtfully designed with high-quality integrated appliances and refined finishes. The principal bedroom suite provides a luxurious private retreat, complete with a superbly appointed en suite bathroom.

Both the lounge and adjoining sun room are perfectly positioned to take full advantage of their elevated aspect, affording delightful, far-reaching views across the surrounding broads, and creating a serene and light filled environment throughout the day.

Further potential includes extensive south-facing flat roof areas, ideal for the installation of solar panels.

The property is fully serviced with gas, electricity, mains drainage, and water supply.

Offered with a guide price of £950,000, Parkmead represents a rare blend of history, waterfront living, and development opportunity in a highly sought-after Broadland location.
